“U.S. SOFTWOOD LUMBER DEMAND is expected to continue its upward trajectory from the lows of the global financial crisis of 2008-2009, reaching an all-time high by mid 2020s.” Source: Wood Resources International, LLC, 11/8/18.

BUT, UNFORTUNATELY, our ability to produce softwood lumber falls far behind the demand. Forisk Consulting projects U.S. softwood lumber consumption in 2018 at 50.3 billion board feet (BBFT), but U.S. production is only 37.4 BBFT. 11/8/18.

THERE ARE NOT ENOUGH small trees of quality hardwood species like white and red oaks and poplar in the U.S. Central Hardwood Region to resupply the demand. “Challenges” are predicted for the hardwood industry. Source: Lupold & Bumgardner reporting in the Journal of Forestry, 9/18.

“THE HARDWOOD INDUSTRY relies on export markets for its survival. In 2017, U.S. hardwood producers shipped $4.04 billion worth of U.S. products to global markets; $2.09 billion to Greater China. China, the NAFTA countries and the E.U. make up 82 percent of hardwood exports.” Source: Crossties, Sept/Oct 2018.

“A CLASS ACTION LAWSUIT may be needed to rein-in out-of-control rural fire districts.” That was one of the suggestions made at AFOA’s November Dinner & Discussion when landowners described the high fire dues they are being charged in some areas. One receipt we saw from 2017 charged $8.33 per acre for vacant land fire dues. The Alabama Forestry Commission does a pretty good job of fire control for 10 cents per acre so it’s hard to imagine how much better the fire suppression work must be from a fire district that charges 83 times as much as the Commission. The state legislature needs to fix this problem that they created.

FOREST PROFILES: CONSULTING FORESTERS
 by Paige Townley

Growing up, Peter Frankowski would make frequent trips to visit his grandmother, who lived on Mobile Bay. “Her hobby was plants, so as a kid I spent a lot of time in her greenhouse, taking cuttings and growing things from seeds,” Peter said. “I practically spent all of my summers there with her.”

That exposure to seedlings led to a lifelong horticulture interest for Peter. He graduated from Auburn University with degrees in both horticulture and forestry. From there, he worked for a consulting forester and an international forest company for a while, and a few years later he made the leap to start his own business—a business focused on what he enjoyed most: seedlings.

Since 2001, through his company, Advantage Forestry Container Pines, Peter has been all about helping landowners with reforestation by providing containerized longleaf, loblolly and slash pine seedlings. His seedlings are grown at a greenhouse in Tifton, Georgia, and shipped all over the southeast. “I enjoy consulting with customers and vendors on what type of trees would work best. It lets me focus in on what I have always enjoyed: trees and the environment.”

FOREST PROFILES: FOREST PRODUCTS MANUFACTURERS
 by Paige Townley

Rodney Driskill logged in northeast Alabama his entire life. So when he saw a need in the area to stockpile wood, he—along with friend Greg Yarbrough—sought to meet it. Yarbrough had worked as a forest supervisor for Bowater prior to that, so with a combined 50-plus years of experience in timber management, logging and woodland operations, the two bought 12 acres of land and established DeKalb Forest Products.

From high grade hardwood logs to biomass, DeKalb Forest Products has relationships with a number of forest product companies, and for many years they stockpiled wood for all of the major paper mills. While much of that has phased out, the company has adapted right along with the changes in the industry. Today, they provide all of the raw material for Mohegan Renewable Energy’s wood pellet plant that is also located in Crossville, and they are always looking for ways to provide their clients with the products they need. “We deal in all kinds of wood, and we look for smaller diameter timber,” said Rodney. “We chip almost everything that isn’t usable for a higher use, and merchandise the other to achieve the greatest return for the landowner.”

“WE HOPE YOU DON’T VOTE ON JANUARY 29 IN BUTLER COUNTY.”

That’s the message delivered by county officials who have scheduled a vote on a 50% increase in property taxes on a date when they hope no one will vote. All of us have seen this happen in our counties, too, and it makes us really angry. Voting “NO” on January 29 will be Butler County residents’ chance to send a message to their elected officials: “Spending $60,000 to conduct a special election (printing, poll workers, etc.) that could have been included at no cost on the November 6 ballot is not appreciated.”

A THIRD MISSISSIPPI DEER has been found infected with Chronic Wasting Disease.

AN AFOA MEMBER (who doesn't use AFOA's Hunting Lease Liability Insurance) called to describe a problem he has had with his hunting insurance provider's Certificate of Liability Insurance. His name didn't appear on the certificate and he was worried that he might not be protected by the insurance bought by his hunting club. We asked AFOA's insurance agent, Ed Wilson, Outdoor Underwriters, about the man's concerns and Ed said, "If his name isn't on the certificate he may not be a 'named insured' on the policy. If he isn't a named insured, the insurance company won't fight claims against him in court." Ed suggested he call the insurance agent to make sure he is a "named insured." Unfortunately, they don't answer their phone.

AMERICAN FOREST MANAGEMENT

EVERY YEAR — SAME ADVICE:

- ◆ Grow pines with high enough quality (straight trees, tight growth rings) to make power poles.
- ◆ Find a consulting forester skilled in hardwood management, especially oaks.

Data source: Timber Mart-South quarterly reports from 1989 to present. Not corrected for inflation.

WE ALWAYS CHECK TIRES BEFORE HEADING TO THE WOODS: Trailer, tractor, truck, spares. So for Christmas, Santa, please bring me a DeWalt Flexvolt Cordless Air Compressor Kit. From Farm Show: "I can just set the tire pressure I want and walk away...paid for itself in time savings alone."
