Call the University of Alabama Center for Economic Development at (205) 348-7058. Editor’s Note: Landowners should be aware of public trail creation plans and their potential impact on adjacent property. Public trails require land, and short-term and long-term funding (tax dollars). Should the state compete with private landowners in providing this recreation opportunity?

February 6...Tifton, Georgia 8:30 AM - 5 PM ET. 2020 Timber Taxation Workshop at the Tifton Campus Conference Center, 15 RDC Road. Timber taxes are one of the major expenses every private forest landowner has. Federal and state incentives are available to provide tax relief to qualified forest landowners. However, many of them continue to pay more than their fair share due to lack of knowledge on timber taxation. The recent tax reform added more complexity to it. This course will provide basic information about forest-related federal income taxation and property taxes in Georgia. It will also give an update on the recent tax reform and how it affects your tax return for 2019. Instructor: Dr. Yanshu

TRAVEL TO CHILE (April 18 - May 3) with the American Forest Foundation on a 14-day forestry tour that will start in Santiago and travel south through the country to Puerto Montt. This tour will give participants the chance to: Experience the people and culture of Chile, See the diversity of Chilean forests and management regimes, Share the experience with fellow landowners and foresters, Explore Chilean beaches, mountains, and cities, and Enjoy Chilean dining and world class wines. There are about 10 slots open. Estimated total costs: $6,750 per person. Contact Beth Riley at (402) 983-0655. DEADLINE: January 15.

From Cleveland Whiskey’s website we read: “For generations, oak has been used to age spirits simply because it has the right pore structure to hold liquid. It’s hard, if not impossible, to make a barrel out of black cherry, hickory, or honey locust that doesn’t leak like a sieve. And yet there are so many untapped flavor profiles that can come from these woods. Our technology captures those flavors, letting creativity and innovation shine.”

MORE SUCCESSFUL TIMBER SALES through landowner co-ops will be discussed by Consulting Forester John Loflin on January 17 in Covington County. Co-ops are used by butter makers (Land O’ Lakes) and honey producers (Sioux Honey Association Co-op) to gain stable prices and security, so why not a Timber Growers Co-op? It’s an understatement to say that Cooper Marine & Timbers has a lot going on. The company buys land, procures timber from landowners, and then harvests and sells its products to sawmills and paper mills alike—and it’s doing so all over Alabama.

A division of Cooper/T. Smith, Cooper Marine and Timberland is headquartered in Mobile, but its wood yards are scattered around Alabama. The company operates a wood yard in Aliceville, which is specifically set up for storing and selling timber to Georgia Pacific. In Creola, the company operates an International Paper wood yard, where they sell the company pine and hardwood. Cooper Marine and Timberland also operates wood yards in Jackson and Mobile. In addition to its heavy presence across Alabama, Cooper Marine and Timberland also has a procurement operation in northeast Mississippi, Texas and Florida. Recently, the company even acquired the Carrollton Sawmill in Carrollton, which is a pine mill that specializes in producing one-inch rough-cut lumber for domestic use as well as exporting. “We are really a big procurement organization from South Alabama all the way up to North Alabama,” said Senior VP of Timber Operations Tom Bradley III. “We buy it all, from poles and logs to hardwood and pulpwood. If it’s a tree, we’re interested in buying it and producing something with it.”

4.1 Split gifts with your attorney as you prepare to plan or update your will.

4.2 Restricted or contingent gifts are a way to restrict your gift for a specific purpose. A charitable gift can be unrestricted, restricted or contingent.

4.3 Estate planning is that simple. You plan for the sake of the people in your life. Don’t become so engrossed in the legal and tax complexities that you lose sight of the welfare and comfort of those you want to help. And while you are planning for the financial needs of others, your first concern should continue to be your own security and standard of living.

8 Ways to Establish Bequests

The gifts in your will can take various forms. They can be cash or personal and real property. They can be shares of the residue of your estate. They can be given outright or in trust. You can designate your gift for a specific purpose. A charitable gift can be unrestricted, restricted or contingent.

Here are eight generally accepted ways to make a bequest. Discuss them with your attorney as you prepare to plan or update your will.

1. Specific bequest. This is a gift of a specific item to a specific beneficiary. For example, “I give my golf clubs to my nephew John.” If you no longer own the golf clubs at your death, the bequest fails and John cannot claim any other property. (In other words, John wouldn’t receive cash for the value of the golf clubs instead.)

2. General bequest. This is a gift of a stated sum of money. It will not fail, even if there is not enough cash in your estate to pay this bequest. For example, “I give $50,000 to my daughter, Mary.” If there is only $2,500 cash in the estate, other assets must be sold to pay the bequest.

3. Contingent bequest. This is a bequest made on condition that a certain event must occur before distribution to the beneficiary. For example, “I give $50,000 to my son, Joe, provided he enrolls in college before age 21.” A contingent bequest is specific in nature and fails if the condition is not met. (In other words, Joe wouldn’t receive cash for the value of the golf clubs instead.)

4. Residuary bequest. This is a gift of all the “rest, residue and remainder” of your estate after all other debts, taxes and bequests have been paid. For example, let’s say you own property worth $500,000 and you intend to give a child $50,000 by specific bequest and leave $450,000 to your spouse through a residuary bequest. If the debts, taxes and expenses are $100,000, there would only be $350,000 left for the surviving spouse. Therefore, most attorneys agree that the preferred method to ensure that your beneficiaries receive the proportions you desire is to divide your estate according to percentages of the residue (rather than specifying dollar amounts).

The previous four methods can apply to bequests for individuals or charitable organizations. The following four items are special considerations when you plan a charitable bequest.

5. Unrestricted bequest. This is a gift for the charitable organization’s general purposes to be used at the discretion of its governing board. A gift like this—without conditions attached—is frequently the most useful because it allows the charity to determine the wisest and most pressing need for the funds at the time of receipt. Here is sample language that your attorney could include in your will when making this type of bequest: “I give to [legal name and address of charitable organization] [dollar amount, percentage of residuary estate or description of property] to be used as determined by its governing board.”

6. Restricted bequest. This type of gift allows you to specify how the funds are to be used. Perhaps you have a special purpose or project in mind. If so, it’s best to consult with the charitable organization when you make your will to be certain your intent can be carried out according to your wishes.

7. Honorary or memorial bequest. This is a gift given “in honor of” or “in memory of” someone. Charitable organizations normally have many ways to grant appropriate recognition.

8. Endowed bequest. This bequest allows you to restrict the principal of your gift, requiring the charity to hold the funds permanently and use only the annual investment income or a small percentage of the total fund each year. Creating an endowment in this manner means that your gift can continue giving indefinitely, and you can leave a lasting legacy.

Watch Out!

Be very careful to accurately name your beneficiaries. No one receives anything from your will unless complete and accurate names are used.
School TREASURE Forest Grows Good Stewards

By Marlee Moore

Laughter, squeals and questions echo through 10 acres of hardwood trees and winding nature trails as kids explore the grounds at McDavid-Jones Elementary School (MJES) in Citronelle.

The property, a certified TREASURE Forest, is a hotbed of learning for Mobile County pre-K through fifth-grade students, said teacher Joy Herring.

“I love seeing kids out in nature. More importantly, they love it,” said Herring, the science lab coordinator at MJES.

Over 20 years, Herring and scores of parent and community volunteers turned a former gully bordering school property into a TREASURE Forest with 11 learning stations, an amphitheater, arboretum, pavilion, walking trail, raised garden beds and wildflower field.

MJES is one of two Alabama schools to earn a stamp of approval from the program, which stands for Timber, Recreation, Environment, Aesthetics, Sustainable, Usable, Resources.

“Even though these kids live in a rural area, they don’t know much about the outdoors,” Herring said. “We do anything that will get them learning outside.”

Herring’s hard work supplementing in-class lessons with TREASURE Forest training is paying off for the 1,000 students at MJES.

Walking through the halls of MJES, one teacher thanked Herring for providing dirt for her classroom terrarium — a point one student quickly corrected.

An animal print identification course zeroes in on the differences in native wildlife. Students learn to identify trees, too, observing hickory, loblolly, longleaf, Southern magnolia, laurel oak, yaupon holly and more.

The TREASURE Forest, also an Alabama Outdoor Classroom, is mostly hardwoods, with just an acre of longleaf pine, the Alabama state tree. Retired MJES educator Man- dy Meeks led the charge to establish the longleaf plantation in the early 90s, a task Herring was glad to pick up when she joined the staff in 1999.

“When you retire from a school, not everyone you leave behind has the same passion,” Meeks said. “But Joy had that passion, and the school leadership supports her.”

Herring’s zeal for TREASURE Forest started on her family land just across the Mississippi line.

“One of the reasons Robert (her husband) and I decided to certify our TREASURE Forest and hold Classroom in the Forest was so our kids could come to our homeplace, bring their friends and be proud of it,” Herring said. “When I found out McDavid-Jones had 10 acres (the required minimum acreage) at the school, I said, ‘Oh yes, we have to do it.’”

MJES was recertified as a TREASURE Forest this year, concentrating on enhancing wildlife habitat and educating future stewards of the land.

In addition to exploring the MJES TREASURE Forest, pre -K through fifth-grade students annually attend Classroom in the Forest at Pratt Turner Conservation Center. They discover wildlife and forestry facts and learn the importance of private landownership.

Alabama TREASURE Forest Association (ATFA) Executive Director William Green applauded Herring for her work improving students’ knowledge of the outdoors. The ATFA is an affiliate of the Alabama Farmers Federation.

“Alabama is blessed with bountiful natural resources like those on display at McDavid-Jones Elementary School,” Green said. “From the walking trail to the pine plantation, students have ample opportunities to learn about their surroundings. We’re grateful for landowners like Mrs. Joy who see the value in natural resource education.”

Herring said her goals for the TREASURE Forest are simple — eradicate cogongrass in the wildflower field, extend the nature trail through the longleaf pine plantation, erect owl boxes and complete a controlled burn using Alabama Forestry Commission resources.

“At the end of the day, our goal is to grow good stewards,” she said. “They’re the future of the world.”

A LOGGER REPORTED: “We had a lady drive up to the job one time and say, ‘I can’t believe you’re destroying these trees and all the wildlife,’” and she lived in phase one of the development that we had cleared two years ago.” Source: Southern Loggin’ Times, April 2019.

REMOTE AND OFF THE GRID, an Australian tiny house rental business is taking off for two young entrepreneurs. “What started out as one cabin in the bush managed by twin brothers Cam and Chris Grant in their spare time is now on track to be a sizeable travel company…” The startup turned over A$500,000 last year with more than 2,700 nights of accommodation booked and an occupancy rate of 95 per cent.” Source: The Sydney Morning Herald, 12/17/19. An AFOA member called to complain about the new baiting license, suggesting that numerous piles of corn near property lines may lead to an increase in shooting accidents. What do you think? FERAL HOG CONTROL: In 2020, a three-year pilot project for feral swine control will start in select watersheds around Alabama. U.S. Department of Agriculture Wildlife Services received $3.7 million to combat feral swine damage in Baldwin, Escambia, Geneva, Henry, Houston and Sumter counties. This translates to 14 full-time technicians who will work with landowners to remove feral pigs. For landowners outside of these pilot areas, assistance is still available through Wildlife Services’ normal operating budget. For more information, contact Wildlife Services at (334) 844-5670.
