Political vs. Private Forest Management: Reason for Hope!

By

H. Sterling Burnett, Ph.D. Senior Fellow National Center for Policy Analysis

Presentation at

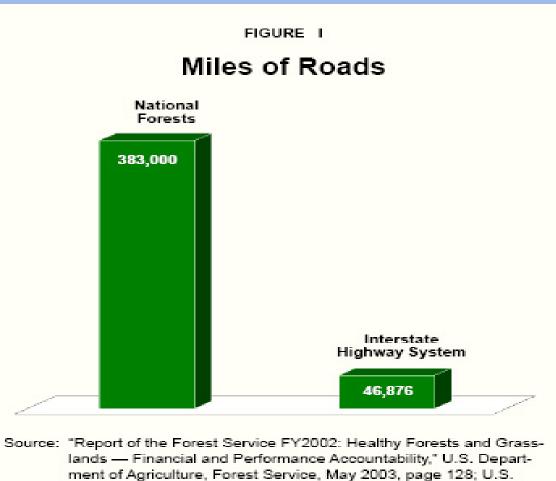

The Alabama Forest Owner's Association 29th Annual Conference

"Producers in a Consumer Driven Economy"

April 16, 2008

Ideas Changing the World

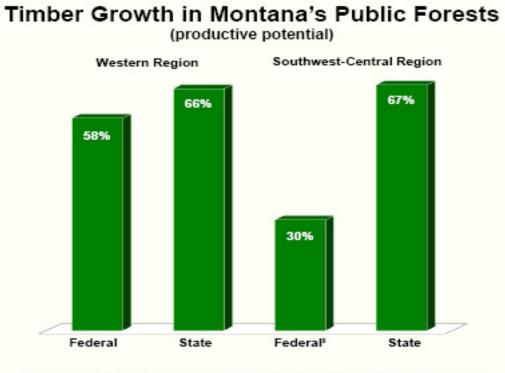

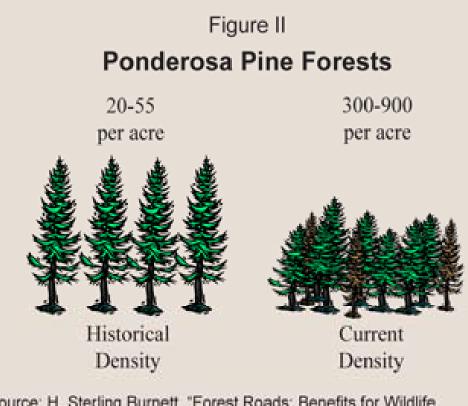

FIGURE III

Source: Donald R. Leal, "Turning a Profit on Public Forests," Political Economy Research Center, Policy Series No. PS-4, September 1995.

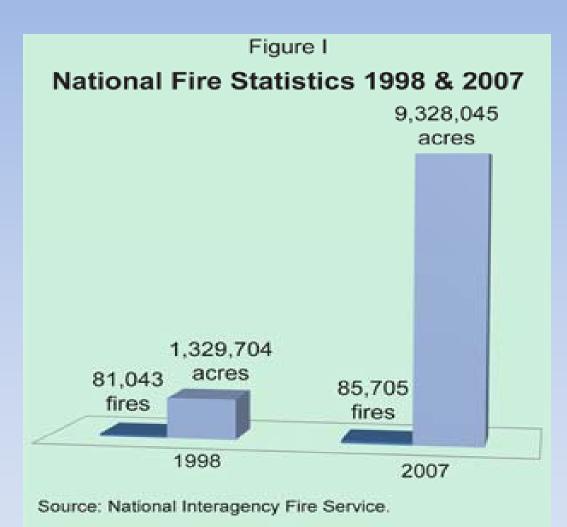

* This does not include the Gallatin National Forest, an old-growth forest, which actually had a negative annual growth rate.

Source: H. Sterling Burnett, "Forest Roads: Benefits for Wildlife Management, Fire Suppression and Water Quality," Water Resources Impact, Vol. 3, No. 3, May 2001.

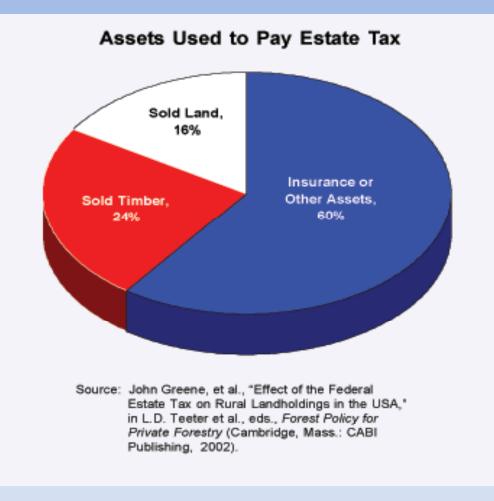

✓ Be proud of and tout the virtues of your industry: valuable products, jobs, values, lifestyles, environmental amenities.

- Niche marketing organic or green certification.
- Ancillary income (subject to state laws and liability) fee hunting, camping, etc.
- Biomass fuel (beware of discrimination)
- ✓ Things to beware of, in my opinion:
 - New clean water regulations
 - Endangered Species
 - Bad practices make bad image and lead to calls for increased regulation
 - Trusts and perpetuities

Ideas Changing the World