

Alabama Landowner Study

Be part of an important needs and interests research study!

Are you over 19 years of age?

Do you either own land in Alabama or are interested in attending programs about forestry, wildlife, and natural resources in Alabama?

If you answered YES to these questions, you are eligible to participate in a study to obtain information on landowners' educational interests and needs related to forestry, wildlife, and natural resources topics. The study also examines the scheduling needs of participants and the challenges to attending extension led programming.

To participate you can go to www.aces.edu/go/landownersurvey

There is not compensation if you participate in this study. However, benefits to you or others after the completion of the study may include tailored programming in the areas of interest you identified and more effective timing and location of programs. This may benefit landowners and resource professionals by better understanding the needs of clientele and opportunities to engage with this community.

This study is being conducted by the Alabama Cooperative Extension System and the Auburn University College of Forestry, Wildlife, and Environment.
